THE CITY.

THE DAILY ASTORIAN will be sent by mail at 25 cents a month, free of postage. Readers who contemplate absence from the city can have the ASTORIAN follow them, DAILY or WEEKLY, at any post-office with out additional expense. Addresses may be changed as often as desired. Leave orders at the counting room.

Read the ad. of the excursion on the Gen. Canby this morning.

Rev. Mr. McLaugherty will preach in the Methodist church this morning and evening at the usual hours.

The Ona, South Bend and Edith, are lying at the foot of Cass street, and are being put in sea going trim.

From the Oregonian we learn that the dry dock which is building at Albina, will be finished about the 1st of next April, and will cost $125,000.

The Statesman thinks that the fact of a Walla Walla jeweler selling a $1,200 diamond is sufficient evidence that there is money in the country.

Presbyterian church—Rev. J. H. Condit, of Albany, Oregon, will preach at 11 a. m., and the pastor at 7:30 p. m. Sunday school at noon.

Sixty shillings is the lowest, and sixty-seven shillings, six pence, the highest, freight paid on salmon shipments to Liverpool from Astoria this season.

Congregational church—Rev. T. W. Walters will preach at 11 a. m. and will give a lecture to the young people at 7:30 p. m. Sunday school at noon.

Talmage says in one of his late sermons, that "newspapers are the front wheels of the Lord's chariot." We sell them at four bits a hundred neatly tied up and of ancient date.

The handsomest advertising cards we have ever seen are published by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass., who will send a set of them to any address on receipt of a letter stamp.

The August term of the circuit court for this county is about closed. Judge Stott and District Attorney Caples went up to Portland on yesterday afternoon's boat. The former will be down in a few days to hear some cases in equity.

The Glengarry finished loading yesterday. She has 25,000 cases of salmon aboard. The Victoria went to sea at 4 a. m. yesterday. The Banfish starts up this morning. The State is due to-morrow morning.

The Daily Commercial News and Shipping List, published at San Francisco, is a first rate commercial journal and exhibits a fairness in discussing matters and giving news and commercial statistics that entitle it to the confidence of its subscribers.

The people of Olympia have lately voted against levying a tax for the purpose of building a new school-house. They can never expect to compete with their Seattle friends unless they exhibit more enterprise than that. A schoolhouse is about as good an advertisement for a place that wants to grow, as can be devised.

The engineers report to the secretary of war is adverse to building a bridge across Young's river below the Waluski, or across Lewis and Clarke's rivers below Barrow's farm. Tie to many a surprise, and to all concerned a regret, that the engineers report on nearly everything which concerns Astoria's interest, and upon which report can be made, is always adverse to the interests of this place.

The little coaster Ona, was beached yesterday, in order to have a new propeller put on. A few days ago while making her first trip from Portland to Tillamook she lost her propeller as she was crossing out, it halving and dropping off. Fortunately for the safety of the vessel there was a good breeze from the northwest, and by quick work the captain got out his sails and swung around, just missing the wreck of the Edith Lorne, upon which he would otherwise have gone.

Jury Disagreed.

At ten o'clock yesterday morning the jury in the case of John Bain, charged with murder, sent word to the judge that they could not agree. They were accordingly brought into court and discharged. On the last ballot the vote had stood, six for conviction of manslaughter, and six for acquittal. Bonds to the amount of $5,000 were furnished for the appearance of the defendant at the next term of the circuit court to be held in this city next January, and he was allowed to go on bail.

It is an unwritten law in newspaper offices, that until a case has been removed from the jurisdiction of the court it is not to be commented upon in public print. For that reason we are constrained to refrain from any comment upon the action of the jury. Perhaps it is as well to let a good deal remain unsaid that is the result of years of experience and observation. Those who were present during the trial and heard the remarks of the counsel, both for the defense and prosecution, cannot but agree with the sentiments there enumerated in reference to the duty of society to the individuals composing it, and of individuals to the society of which they form component parts.

A Woman's View of it.

The following from the New North-west correctly illustrates the feeling of the better class of society regarding the legal farce lately enacted here:

James A. Lawrence, who deserted his wife in this city and induced Miss Nellie Sloan to elope with him, marrying her in Astoria under the name of T. F. Squires, pleaded guilty in the state circuit court to the crime of bigamy and was sentenced to a fine of $500, which amount a relative paid, and the second wife was set at liberty. His first wife having obtained a divorce, he was promptly re-married to Miss Sloan, who had also returned to the state after being deserted by him in Switzerland, and the disgraced couple sailed on the outgoing steamer. Thus culminated one of the most sorrowful cases of desertion and elopement in the annals of crime—a case which produced a profound sensation and shocked every circle of Portland society.

The judge and prosecuting attorney who allowed Lawrence to escape with so light a penalty for his great crime were without doubt actuated by worthy motives and desired to do the best under the circumstances for all parties concerned, particularly Miss Sloan, but we question the wisdom of their judgment.

Lawrence's marriage to Miss Sloan under his proper name certainly gave no guarantee for his good behavior in the future. It only opens the way to further crime by him and greater misery for her. She can enjoy no happiness with the totally depraved wretch whom she is henceforth to call husband, but must constantly rack with the fear that he will desert her as he did his first wife in Portland and herself in Europe. The marriage may bring her temporary relief, but it will be brief indeed. A thousand times better off would she be in her shame away from him than in her disgrace with him. As long as she may live, there will float before her agonized vision a picture of the wrecked home where first she listened to the lying words of an unfaithful husband, and her waking and sleeping moments will be haunted by the fleeing phantom of the man she cannot honor and dare not trust, while the saddened face of his cruelly wronged first wife will look nuttely and appealingly upon her from every nook and corner of her unhallowed home.

The first wife of this monster, grief-stricken and broken-hearted, lives in her Portland cottage in an atmosphere of sadness, treasuring the ashes of her dead love and the dust of her cherished hopes, her faith in human truth and goodness wrecked, and her future happiness forever blighted. Surrounded though she be by relatives and friends, naught but misery awaits her in the knowledge that the man whom she so honored and adored, and who proved so unworthy of her woman's love, is now the husband of one who can never bestow upon him the affection and respect that made his Portland home a haven of peace and happiness while she lived in serene unconsciousness of his hellish nature. No redress has the law afforded her, and no punishment has it meted out to the wretch who so cruelly wronged her.

Look upon this sad case in any light we may, it is evident that the escape of Lawrence only means the greater ultimate unhappiness of both his victims, with the prospect that he will yet wrong other women as he has Miss Von Bolton and Miss Sloan. The iron doors of the penitentiary should have closed upon him and saved an outraged community from the contamination of his presence. It was a grave mistake to turn the vicious animal loose to again prey upon society.

Peruvian Bitters.

Cinchona Rubra.

The Count Cincelion was the Spanish Viceroy in Peru in 1632. The Countess, his wife, was prostrated by an intermittent fever, from which she was freed by the use of the native remedy, the Peruvian bark, or, as it was called in the language of the country, "Quinaquina." Grateful for her recovery, on her return to Europe in 1632, she introduced the remedy in Spain, where it was known under various names, until Linnaeus called it Cinchona, in honor of the lady who had brought them that which was more precious than the gold of the Incas.

To this day, after a lapse of two hundred and fifty years, science has given us nothing to take its place. It effectually cures a morbid appetite for stimulants, by restoring the natural tone of the stomach. It attacks excessive level of liquor as it does a fever, and destroys both alike. The powerful tonic virtue of the Cinchona is preserved in the Peruvian Bitters, which are as effective against malarial fever to-day as they were in the days of the old Spanish Viceroys. We guarantee the ingredients of these bitters to be absolutely pure, and of the best known quality. A trial will satisfy you that this is the best bitters in the world. "The proof of the pudding is in the eating." We are willing to abide this test. For sale by all druggists, grocers and liquor dealers. Order of: Loeb & Co., agents for Astoria.
